Introduction

The digest is not an abstract. It is a one-page condensation or summary which outlines the work to be reported and includes as many of the results as possible. The inclusion of figures, tables, and especially numerical results is strongly recommended. As in the past, the Program Committee will make its selection by ranking digest on their technical content and intelligibility. Authors considering submission of several digests are requested to combine them to achieve a balanced and high quality technical program.

Formatting

Each digest is limited to one page in length. All material on each page, including title, authors and affiliation, text, equations, figures, tables, and references must be contained within a 16.5 cm x 21.5 cm (6.5" x 8.5") rectangular area. Position this rectangular area such that the left hand-side, right hand-side and top margins are 2.5 cm (1") and the bottom margin is 3.5 cm (1.5"). Digest must be in English, and only standard symbols and abbreviations should be used in the text and illustrations. List and number all bibliographical references at the end of the digest. When referring to them in the text, type the corresponding reference number in square brackets [1]. When numbering an equation, enclose the number in parentheses and place it flush with the right-hand side margin. Images (Figure 1) can be included in eps format using the graphicx package.

Previous Intermag participants may recall that the corresponding author and presentation preference information used to be at the bottom of the first page of the digest. This information will now be entered directly to the web site. Do NOT include this information in the digest itself.

Conversion to pdf

The document can be converted to pdf by means of pdflatex (`pdflatex -p a4 document.tex`), after which you can upload it to the website.
